Nearest Point

Nearest point fonts use special logic to determine the best way to join characters together. There are four versions of each character to enable the special joining method. Nearest Point fonts are ideally used with Running Stitch connection, to avoid the need for trimming with small characters. Each character has four versions to give different start (on the left) and end (on the right) points as shown below. The correct character versions are automatically selected to give the shortest joining distances between each character.
